R. AUSTIN'S Boiling Down Estatus tablishment, at Hereford, within one mile of the Township of Bathurst.

E. Austin, sole proprietor, begs to inform the Stockholders and Settlers in the Districts of Bathurst, Carcoar, the Lachlan, and Wellington, that the above Establishment is now in full operation, and that he is now prepared to receive cattle and sheep in any quantities. The establishment being fitted up on an extensive scale, the proprietor is enabled to boil at one time, from 400 to 500 sheep, and from 40 to 500 sheep, and from 40 to 500 sheep, and from 40 to 500 sheep. The charges for boiling down will be as follows, viz.:

Sheep ....... 8d. per head Cattle.

The charges for boiling down will be as follows, viz.:

Sheep ....... 8d. per head Cattle, up 9s. per head Cattle ... 9s. per head E. Austin will make advances, when required, on cattle and sheep delivered at his establishment, and on fat rendered there; he will also putchase fat, hides, and skins. Casks will be formished at cost price; and in every case where shepherds or stockmen are unavoidably detained at the establishment, the proprieter will supply them with rations gratis.

E. Austin avails nimself of this opportuity, of strongly pointing out to the stockholders in the above districts the very great advantages to be derived from having cattle or sheep boiled down at an establishment at Bathurst, in preference to sending them to Sydney for that purpose, offen at a loss of 25 per cent, in the driving down; these advantages are too obvious to need comment.

Applications to be addressed, post paid, to the undersigned, sole proprietor, Esthurst.

PORT PHILLIP.

PORT PHILLIP.
Our ausual file of papers came to hand on Saturday morning, but there is very little in them of any public interest.

There was a public meeting of Squatters held at the Royal Hotel, Melbourne, on Friday, 22nd March, at which, resolutions were passed to the effect "that the amount of taxes proposed to be levied by the District Council of Bourke is totally inconsistent with the present insolvent condition of the colony, and more than the settlers can afford to pay." A memorial was to be addressed to the Legislative Council praying for relief, and the memorial is to be ac-companied by a list of the insolvencies which have taken place in the Port Phillip district, in order to show the Legislature that the Port Philippians cannot afford to be taxed more heavily than they already

MITCHELL, and Mr. KEMBLE; although the Editor of the Patriot promises another good man and true at the proper season. Dr. Lang, it appears, has given his influence to Sir T. L. MITCHELL, as appears from the following extract from the Patriot. Alluding to a letter of Dr. Lang's, the Patriot

Speaking of the then forthcoming elections, Dr. Lang says,—"If Mr. Robinson were safe, I should like, I confess, to see Sir Thomas Mitachell brought in, as you really owe him such a compliment for having done so much to make known your splendid province to the world. I understand he goes for separation. I shall be at no loss to bring forward that measure mow; the retirement of all the three resident members being the best possible argument for it."

being the best possible argument for it."

Mr. ROBINSON having been elected for Melbourne, and having declared himself for separation, also, it is probable that the question will be brought forward during the next session, in a somewhat more serious strain than it was talked of last sessions by Mr. C. H. Ennax.

The Melbourne races came off on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, the 19th, 30th, and 21st March, and there appears to have been little else attended to during the whole week.

The Patriot announces that great bene-

HEALTH OF THE CITY.

HEALTH OF THE CITY.

We carnestly solicit the City Council to direct their attention to the commencement of a system of sewerage and drainage of the City, which we look upon as one of the most important, if not the most important, matter committed to their charge: on this point, however, we shall not dilate, our esteemed correspondent "Peter Putaght" having saif all that is requisite upon it. The expense which must be incurred, is, we presume, the cause of the delay that has taken place, and in the present depressed state of the cause of the delay that has taken place, and in the present depressed state of the colony, it is necessary that the expenditure of every farthing should be closely watched: but the sewerage is a work of necessity: it must be done, and the longer it is delayed the more difficult will it be to perform, and the larger will be the expense that must be incurred. Some months since, Alderman MACDERMOTT gave no-tice, and, we believe, carried a motion, requesting the Mayon to place £6000 on his estimate, to be expended during the present year in sewerage; but since then, we have heard no more of it. Of course, the expenditure of that sum would make it necessary ture of that sum would make it necessary to borrow, and, we think, that of money to be specially devoted to the drainage of the City, it would be quite fair to borrow two-thirds, one-third being raised by assessment. We can assure the Council that we look upon this matter with the greatest interest, as one affecting the health of the citizens, and we hope no more time will be lost. The formation of sewers will of course occupy a long time; but by working in two or three parts of the town at once, a great improvement would very soon be made.

IMAGENET.—On the afternoon of Saturday last, an inquisition was held at Leburn's public-house, on the body of Thomas Holmes, aged about forty-five years, who had expired on the preceding day in the Benevolent Asylum, he having been found dead in his bed. From the evidence of Mr. Surgeon Cuthill, it appeared that he had examined the body of the deceased, whom he had known for the last two years as a man addicted to drink. When deceased could not obtain spirits, he would drink laudanum. No phial was found in his bed, but one which contained laudanum had been taken from him sometime ago by Mr. Cuthill. In the state of health in which deceased was, if he had taken laudanum, it would have caused death. The body on being examined, showed such symptoms as induced Mr. Cuthill to depose that death had been the result of natural causes. The jury returned a verdict of died by the visitation of God.

val, though we could have wished to have seen his keen penetration and talent allowed a greater and more frequent acope upon some occasions, we cannot but be sensible of the good taste which preferred rather to speak shortly, vet pithily to the purpose, in lieu of courting popularity by a needless display. Mr. Foster's votes have throughout been distinguished by an honesty of purpose: we consider that he has invariably acted in the way that he conscientiously deemed right; and although he did not support the wholessle spoliation, the crippling of the Government machine, the democratical prostration of power, as some members did; we cannot find it in our hearts to call him to account for not having done so, or to pass cenwe cannot find it in our hearts to call him to account for not having done so, or to pass censure on his legislative fitness, because he had the moral courage to vote as he thought fit. The very fact of this having opposed many of the palpablyunnecessary reductions, is in our opinion a main ingredient of his fitness, whilst his admirable explanation and masterly opinion upon the invidious and plausible Pfandbrief scheme, no less than his caustic dressing to the projectors, convinces us that his is the very needed Argus' understanding, most likely and honestly stances, we must stand aloof from our compeers of Singleton, who, being the least considerable of Mr. Foster's constituency, will have the enviable notoriety of enjoying their condemnatory resolutions, inter se, in opposition to the approbation and confidence of the majority of their fellow-electors!

Mr. Richard Wisseman is about dividing his splendid Wollombi property into small farms, which, according to the advertisement, holds out an advantageous industreement to tenants from the liberality of the terms, no less than the locality and richness of the soil. The establishment of so many respectable small tenants upon the property in question, will be the way of advancing the interest and importance of that portion of our district—the labour of each will profit all. The splendid Cobham Hall Estate is we find leased for a term of years. The applications previous to the annual licensism meeting for our joint district will shortly have to be made; in the M Donald, we opine, that one or more of the present publicans will retire, their business for many months past having been on the wane, in consequence of the great extension of tectotal principles.

GOULBUEN.

MARCH 28.—We expected the equinoctial gales had passed over during the boisterous weather we had a week or two back,—but to-day the wind has been unusually violent—indeed the most disagreeable day we have had for a long season. Rain is much wanted to put the land in condition for the plough. This gay township is still going a-head; new buildings are now again seen starting up in different directions, and the inhabitants are as lively as in the best of times: pic-nics, balls, and suppers, are the order of the day.

The boiling-down establishment got up steam yesterday, and if every bullock turns out asprofitable as the one rendered down as an experiment, the sooner a few hundreds of them are subjected to the tallow-rendering process the better it will be for the stockholders: the one we refer the weighed about 700 lbs., and yielded about one-third weight of tallow. The commencement of operations by M'Kellar and White was the signal for another pic-nic, ball, and supper, all of which were duly attended. The former was at the boiling-down premises and the latter at the Salutation Inn. About fifty ladies and gentlemen assembled and first had a dance, and then sat down to supper about twelve o'clock,—Dr. Waugh in the chair, and Mr. Brodie croupier. Several loyal and appropriate toasts were given—"the Queen," "the Governor," "the Ladies"—proposed by Mr. Sinclair and responded to by Mr. Earl; "Success to the boiling establishment," by Mr. Brodie. Mr. White returned thanks: "Town and Trade of Goulburn," proposed by Mr. Meyers, to which Mr. Mendleson responded, &c., &c. The harmony of the meeting was never excelled by any, and after supper the "flare up' was resumed, and the glee abated not till the dawn of day.

There is a remarkable want of interest in the doings of the District Council, few know when there is to be a meeting. We would suggest that a notice be posted at the Court-house door, intimating when a meeting is to take place. We do not hear of any gentlemen, with the exception of one, being named t did not pay; they were quite willing to give up the rum, if the bread and the meat were supplied to them at contract price. I am aware that a very general feeling of dissatisfaction existed among the roops then serving in the colony, and it was understood that the very judicious steps taken by Colonel Despard (now of the 99th) and Colonel Mackenzie (of the 4th) led to the General rescinding the obnoxious order; at all events, no stoppage of spirits took place—and (I may call it) the more than disaffection (which, it was afterwards known, existed in a systematic and formidable degree) ecased altogether. From this it appears, the soldiers care little, I believe, about the rum, if justice is done them, and they are supplied with their provisions, as in England and Ireland, at the cheapest rate—where they are furnished by the contractor, without the intervention of the Commissaviat, and paid for by the Regimental Paymaster.

You will perceive, the soldier can by this proper course be relieved without the loss now occurring to the revenue being longer continued. If you deem these remarks worthy a place in your really valuable journal, please insert them.

P.S. — When I was serving in the West Indies, soldiers paid sixpence a day for their rations. But there they were supplied with coffee or checolate twice a day, and posa or rice alternate days; here, no such allowance is GENTLEMEN,—I think we shall in a short time rather praise Poverty than abuse him as we now do, for he has introduced his partner, Necessity, and she has produced among us a fine bantling, Invention, which will, I doubt not, succour this colony, and in time to come make us acknowledge **Tis good that distress visited us, for out of evil cometh good." We already have our cloth, sugar, tobacco, blacking, leather, and tallow factories; our salting, and gas companies; our printing establishments, and our iron foundries; why then should we not add to these already enjoyed advantages, the manufactory of paper and parchment from our cotton plant, rape seed (for its oil), baaket-willow (which grows well), and smelt our iron-stone, and turn to use the man; other things that now lie idly around individuals procuring a sustenance by collecting.

Parchment.—The skins of our numerous flocks that are now sweated merely for the wool that is left on them, and then thrown away as uscless, would be called into requisition, and would meet a good market at home when created into parchment.

Cottom.—The species of cotton plant that I have seen growing here, and some of which I have collected to send home as an experiment, I doubt not could be made available, were it properly cultivated, and would make a fine return.

Rupe Seed grows well here, and when converted into oil, which can easily be accomplished, would realize a good sale in England, the husks or cake which is left after the oil is extracted, is capital for fattening cattle, thus creating a greater quantity of tallow for the English market.

Basket Willow.—At the same time, as it is a very pretty shrub, in England, yields a quick and fine return, for its use in making baskets, hampers, &c., and would be greatly used here.

Iron Smelting.—I have picked up numerous pieces of iron stone, in which I discovered metal contained therein, to the amount of, I should say, 18 or 20 per cent. in my humble opinion (perhaps more) and I doubt not but that vast numbers of veins might be found, in which the per-centage is very great indeed, and would well repay the individual that would invest his capital in such an undertaking as iron smelting. The tons of iron that are annually imported from Great Britain, to this place, need only to be referred to, to convince any one that when the ore can be plentifully procured, a rapid fortune can be made.

I have, I fear, Gentlemen, intruded too much on your valuable columns: but having the public weal at heart, have framed these few lines, although they may be those of a fool, yet they are well meant, and I hope will be so received.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen.

STATE OF ADMIRAL DUSTING THE OF ADMIRAL DUSTING THE OCCUPATION OF THE MARQUESAS ISLANDS. DURANT IN THE MARQUESAS ISLANDS, being in haste to reach the Marquesas Islands, we steered direct to the Island of Fatuiva, the southernmost of the S.E. group of the State of the State of State for a French flag and a garrison, which I granted. Everything seemed to take a favourable turn to our interests at Vaitahu, when, on the 23rd, I was about to leave the bay to go to Nukuhiva, a man threatened to kill a Spaniard, whom I had sent for from a neighbouring isle, to serve as interpreter, if he did not immediately quit the bay of Vaitahu. The Spaniard immediately rejorted this to me; and it seemed to me that this threat had been made in order to see how far we wished to exert our power. I immediately went to the King, where, having called the man, I told him, in presence of Yetete, that if in the future he attempted to insult any of my men, I would send him on board, and he would never see his island again. He did not seem much frightened at this; and two days after he pursued an Englishman, whom I had sent for from the Island of Haivava, to make lime, and attacked him in the garden of M. Francois de Paule. This event took place in the evening; I was informed of it rather late; however, I went to the King; he was not at his lodge; he had, it was said, gone to wail over a dead body. But I soon learnt that he was at a neighbouring bay, which confirmed me in the opinion that these repeated insults had been provoked by him. I sent a boat to seek the King, but it returned without finding him. I then sent for his nephew, a young man, who speaks English perfectly well, and begged him to go and tell Yetete if he did not return I would no longer consider him as King, and make myself King in his stead. He went, but the King refused to return unless the superior of the mission came to beg of him to come. M. Francois de Paule immediately went, and brought back with him the King, his wife, and his eldest son. The King confessed he was wrong, and that he had concealed himself because he was afraid. I reproached him with his want of confidence in me, and I declared to him that he should deliver up to me the man who was the cause of all this, in order that I might send him on board to punish him. I also announced to h

deminors of the same of the sa inives and daggers. He asked me what I did with them. I told him that they had been sold to me as having been worn by the Manolas of Madrid under their garters. At this he laughed, and throwing two of them on the ground for the put the rest into his private magazine.

I hoped to make something of my young brigand: but while I was talking to him, the captain came suddenly up, and struck me with violence on the back of the sek with the but: end of his carbine, saying,
in a furious tone—' You are looking in his face that you may be able to recognise him!' He then asized me by the right arm, while another took my left, and they again bound them behad fiver, who was literally sewed up in two or three sheepskins, with the wool outwards.
I took good care not to stir from this position,
for the ground was saturated with the snow
which the sun had melted, and brought down in streams from the Somo Sierra. By this probably I escaped the fever which attacked
he student from Tolosa, who lay in the water sore than an hour. When the brigands had secured all they thought worth taking, the eaptain remounted his horse, gave the word of command, and they all retreated. My young puber in passing by me put into my fastened hands the padlock and key of my trunk, and threw over my head a peasant's cloak. After remaining some time recumbent, the postillion, whom the brigands had released before leaving,
unbound the conductor, and thus one after the other we were all set at liberty, and upon our fet gain. The wind had scattered all my papers and books: my first object was to colicet them. The postillion and coa ittle more than a kitchen within four bare walls, in which a young girl endoavoured to make a five with some damp weeds and roots of trees, which sent forth a vile odour and a thick moke, which filled the place, and set all our eyes weeping. The alcalde soon made his appearance in the venta with the Fiel de Fedou-a species of escribono or registrar—accompanied by some peasants with guns in their lands, representing the National Guard. The sheale gravely seated himself by our sides on the wooden beach. He was about sixty years of age, clothed in an old cloak in rags, without any shirt, but an recanche he wore in great pride a little tending to one side of his head, what was once a hat, but was now without any him or top to the crown. The escribane was younger, but apparently more intelligent. He were a peasant's dress, but had on also a pair of boots, a cravat of red cotton, and a hat He were a peasant's dress, but had on also a par of boots, a cravat of red cotton, and a hat estive in all its parts. He placed himself behind a table close to the alcalde, taking from his pocket pens, ink, and stamped paper. The sational guards were in jackets, and shod with shrear, or square pieces of leather, fastened to their legs by long strape crossed over them. The legs themselves were naked, and very few, if any, were shirts. They looked on us with a sen of contemptuous consequential smile. M. Mayo, as a lawyer well acquainted with the sustoms of his country, and knowing the inutility of all these formalities, endeavoured to cut the matter short by requesting the escribano to ity of all these formalities, endeavoured to cut the matter short by requesting the escribano to give at once a certificate of the accident which had occurred. The escribano, however, offended at being dictated to, took his revenge by making us all undergo a most minute and procreatinated interrogatory, taking down from our mouths a detailed description of the property which had been stolen from us. In an hour he filled four large pages of stamped paper in writing very small, but perfectly legishe. I was astonished at his method, and the facility with which he made use of all the law terms. The language was correct, nextly tumed, and very precise. The best magistrate in Spain could not have drawn up a better report. There was one point he did not insist upon—the personal description of the brigands. The conductor, however, declared that they all wore large hats so drawn over their eyes, that it was impossible to distinguish their faces. This was not true, for the man who searched my trunk had nothing on his head but a handkrecheit tightly bound. We passegger thought it most prudent not to consider the testimony of the conductor, for without his smaking any sign to us to that effect, it appeared to us that two or three of the brigands who had robbed us were among the spectators in the room, and were witnesses of all that was passing. The escribano interrupted his work to give orders, in the name of the alcalde, to the National Guards. He sent four of them in pursuit of the robbers, as he said, and four others were to accompany us. They losded their muskets before us. The sentono pulled out of his pocket a handful of small pistol-balls, and distributed them to the men, who put several of them into their trubuces. The ceremony being it inhed, the alcalde rose up solennily, took off his hat, the escribano did the same, and recommended us to follow his example, and swear that our depositions were sincere and exact. We cannot be such as a supplementation of them in the trubuces and the same parady. The serions he int

Size or There.—Our native woods often contain abile specimens of which the bulk is ten or twelve feet in diameter, a width greater by the feet has the carriage-way at Fetter-lane, has Temple-bar; and oaks might be named on the block of which two men could thresh without one incommoding the other. The famous Greenfole oak is pierced by a mod, over which it forms a triumphal arch, higher by several inches than the poot's postern at Westminster Abbey. The centre of the street of the several inches than the poot's postern at Westminster Abbey. The centre of a single oaken plank, is longer than the woods, bridge that crosses the lake in the Regul's Park, and the roof of the great hall of watminster, which is spoken of with admiration on account of its vast span, being unsupported by a single pillar, is little more than suching the width of the noble canopy of wring branches that are upheld by the Workston of the tree spring from one common centre. Architects can alone estimate the excessive puckase who had been strong walls, but the branches of the tree spring from one common centre. Architects can alone estimate the excessive puckase who had been estimate the recomming one in the tree itself grows into a nook that is funded by the junction of the three counties of York, Nottingham, and Derby.—Ruin: and The Shorter Catechism.—An anecdote of simble interest has been handed down as to the preparation of one most important answer in this Catechism. It has been related, that the Committee of Divines who were engaged in framing it came to a pause, when it and to be decided which of them should prepare the answer to that solemn question, what is God? All stood aback from the task, each one feeling himself to be incompetent for the duty. At length it was agreed that it should be performed by the youngest man. pare the answer to that solemn question,—

What is God: All stood aback from the task, each one feeling himself to be incompetent for the duty. At length it was agreed that it should be performed by the youngest man among them, wheever he should turn out to be.
Why the youngest should have been fixed upon for undertaking that from which the most aged and experienced had shrunk, it is not very easy to see, but soit was; and when the individual had been thus selected, it was found, that he would consent to engage in the duty assigned to him only upon one condition—that while he was so employed, the whole of his brethren should separately betake themselves to silent and carnest prayer that he might be especially graded by the Divine Spirit in the fulfillment of his work. To this they consented, and, within a brief space of time, he produced that memoriable answer—tiod is a Spirit, infinite, unchangeable, and eternal, in his being, wisdom
power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth,
—a sentence this, containing a definition or statement of the primary truth of religion, which for fullness and concentration, has never been surpassed, and which, under the circumstances that have been mentioned, may be looked upon as having been almost the dictate of inspiration.

IN THE INSOLVENT ESTATE OF R. D. O'REILLY ESQ.

BY ORDER OF THE TRUSTEES.

UNDER THE ACT Vic. 6, c. No. 17.

M. STUBBS is instructed by the Trustees in the Insolvent Estate of E. D. O'Reilly, Esq., to sell by public suction, at the Mart, King-etreet, on SATURDAY, THE 27th DAY OF APRIL, At twelve o'clock precisely,

All the equity of redemption in and to the undermentioned property, as per morigage deed, viz.—

All that piece or parcel of the Five Dock Farm, situate, lying, and being, in the County of Cumberland and Colony of New South Wales, containing by admeasurement about 55 acres and 1 rood, more or less commencing from the Occupation Road at that part at the east point of the estate, opposite to particular white rocks, commonly called the White H-ree; bounded on the N.E. by the Parramatta Ricer about 46 chains; on the N.W. from the river by an occupation road bearing 8, 42 degrees, unett 94 chains 60 links; on the S.W. by a continuation of the said road, bearing east 40 degrees, south 81 chains; and on the S. and S. by a further continuation of the said road, bearing east 10 degrees, north 96 chains, then east 23 degrees, north 90 links to the commencing point; the said occupation road communicating with the Great North Road near Stonequarry.

Sept. Any person who has ever been a trip to Parramatta by the steamer, must have observed that peruliarly shaped promontory-like piece, or elbow—of land projecting northeast from the point in Iron Cove Bay, off Cockatoo Island, on the Five Dock ride, where the silent waters of the creek yield up their tribute to the more influential stream of the Parramatta River.

A BEAUTIPUL MARINE PRONTAGE of FOURTHOUSAND FEET OF MARGIN ON THE WATER'S EDGE, controls the property and gives it all that various change of aspect which is so necessary for beauty in locality, and healthiness of situation.

The way to it from the Parramatta Road is past Bourke Town, and leads you straight to the what furon out on the Parramatta

The way to it from the Parramatta Road is past Bourke Town, and leads you straight to the wharf thrown out on the Parramatta River.

Dropping the harmony of descriptive language, it is undeniable that from its eligibility of site for Villa, Cottage Ornée—and quiet retreat, away from the busy throng of men, nothing can surpass it.

Who ever thought of this place as AN OYSTER FISHERY!!! one inexhaustible bed of Shell for societies, concealed from view by a sort of felt or cocte, has been lately discovered off this Estate; they are torn away by means of the Dredging Machine, and large Clusters of this Epicurean Luxury soon rewards the industrious fisherman with a "Full Boat." Two Native Boys made $500 to $2400 last year, at 2\frac{1}{2}\text{d}, per dozen.

The improvements comprise a FAMILY COITAGE of frooms, with flugged werandsh, 27 feet long, detached kitchen, and enclosed melon ground.

A MOST REMARKABLE RESERVOIR is on this Estate, to which in the drought season people come miles and miles te enjoy, and be supplied with some of the purest water that ever was tasted; a stone entrenchment is so constructed as to increase or lessen the quantity of water as required.

Two hundred thousand Bricks are on the Estate; Labourers Huts, &c.

The View.

Takes down the River towards the Heads, and compasses all the eye can desite, or Imagination fancy.

Mr. Stubbs is informed by the Trustees, that no less a sung than $5000 has been already expended on this estate by Mr. O'Reilly.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE. (From our own Reporter.)

Before His Honor Mr. Justice Stephen and a Common Jury.

STEALINO.

George Clark and Hugh Wright were indicted for stealing two chests of tea, two boxes soap, and a number of other sticles, the projecty of John Lewis Paul, on the Wellington Road, on the 18th of October, 1843. The information contained two other counts, charging the articles stolen as being the property of Marcus McCartney or William Verner.

From the evidence adduced in this case, it appeared that the property in question had been placed in the care of a drayman named Paul, with a number of other things, for the purpose of being conveyed to Mr. Verner's station, but Paul being the worse for liquor, and a man named Dogherty who accompanied him being in a state of beastly intoxication, the property was abstracted; although how or by whom was not known. Suspicion fell upon the prisoners, who were driving bullock teams to the station of Mr. Finch, of Garrygarack, and upon the drays being traced by Chief Constable Jones, of Bathurst, he apprehended the prisoners with tea and sugar in their possession, answering the description of that which had been lost. The goods were found upon Clark's dray, who claimed them, and said that he had purchased the tea at the stores of Mr. Austin, of Bathurst; but the latter, although he admitted having sold the prisoners some tea, did not believe that the article found in their possession was that which he had himself sold them. A quantity of tea was also found concealed at the foot of a tree, about 160 feet from the hut in which the prisoners resided.

Mr. Churker appeared for the prisoners, and rested his defence, first, upon the ground that wember, 1841, the prisoner was in his service at Broken Shaft Creek. One Saturday, the prisoner went away, with witness's leave, and returned in the evening, when he appeared much excited, and flourished a knife about. Prisoner asked witness why he did not keep the dogs from attacking him, when the latter told him that he had something else to do besides waiting upon blackguards lake him; some quarreling then ensued, and witness laid his hand upon the prisoner's shoulder with intent to turn him out of doors, when the latter stabbed him in the hip, the breast, and the left side. The prisoner then ran away, and a man outside stopped him, but prisoner therefared to serve him the same, and witness cried out to the man to let him go, and come and help him (witness) to staunch the blood; the prisoner by this means got entirely away, and witness never saw him again until the time of his apprehension, about four or five months ago.

On cross-examination by the prisoner, the witness admitted that he had always been upon good terms with the prisoner previous to the occurrence alluded to. The prisoner was somewhat intoxicated at the time, but witness was quite soher.

Samuel Duval stated, that he was at Power's or some such instrument; one was above the fifth rib on the left side, which if a little deeper would have been fatal; considerable hemorrhage had taken place, and even then Power was in considerable danger.

Elizabeth Power, wife of the first witness, was then called, and corrobonated the evidence of the latter in all its leading features.

This closed the case for the Crown, and the prisoner, when called upon for his defence, declined saying anything.

His Honon told the Jury, that in order to find the prisoner guilty of the capital charge contained in the first count, they must arrive at the conclusion that he intended really to commit the crime of murder; but if they thought that a scuffile had taken place, and that the wounds were inflieted in the heat of blood, without any deliberate malice, the crime would be reduced to that contemplated by the second count. In order however to convict the prisoner upon the latter charge, it was merely necessary for them to be satisfied that the blows were struck, not accidentally, but intentionally, without taking into consideration what his intentions were, as it was a maxim of law, in judging of a prisoner's intention, that he must be presumed to have contemplated doing that which was the natural and probable consequence of his actions.

The Jury, after retiring for a few minutes, found the prisoner guilty under the first count, and His Hoxon, after addressing the prisoner upon the fatal results to which his intemperance had led him, remarked, that under all the circumstances of the present case, it was not his intention to enforce the extreme penalty of the law, he therefore directed sentence of death to be recorded, and stated his intention of recommending to his Excellency the Governor, a commutation of that sentence to transportation for life.

The Court then adjourned.

RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY.

John Duffin, late of Hathurst, labourer, was indicted for feloniously receiving one chest of tea, a counterpane, and a piece of check, the property of John Glasson, on the 16th of January last, well knowing the same to have been studen.

The Jury found a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner, after being cautioned by his Honor to be more careful in his future dealings, was discharged.

Highway Robinsty.

Henry Foccoft was indicated for having, at the Wellington Road, on the 4th of January last, assaulted and ill-treated one John Bulger, puting him at the same time in bodily fear and danger, and robbing him of two £1 notes, five half-crowns, and ten cakes, valued at five shilings, and John Buylius, Henry Buylius, and John Wijht, were charged with being present, alding and abetting in the commission of the said felony.

and abetting in the commission of the said I felony.

John Bulger deposed, that on the afternoon of the day in question, he was returning home from Bathurst, and when near the Rock public house, about cleven miles from Bathurst, he saw Foxeroft, Wright, and John Bayliss, who were drinking there; witness went in and drank something himself, but did not get furuk; the prisoners started from the public house first, in company with another man, whom witness could not recognise, but witness soon overtook them, and rode in their company until getting ill from the effects of the liquor; he dismounted, when Foxeroft came up to him, knocked him down, kicked him, and robbed him both of his money and of some cakes which he had jurchased in Bathurst; the other prisoners were standing with their carts about ill teen rods off, looking on at what Foxeroft was doing; witness complained of having been robbed, but refrained from saying much about the matter for fear of being ill-treated; he followed them, however, to the next public house, where he gave Foxeroft in charge for the robbery.

On cross-examination by Mr. Cheeke, who appeared for Wright and the two Baylisses, the witness persisted in saying that he was not drunk, although he admitted having drank several glasses of spirits and porter, but added that he was able to bear half a pint of raw spirits at any time. Witness' horse escaped when Foxeroft kicked him, and witness neither caught him nor attempted to do so, being anxious to follow the prisoners. He did not cry out at the time of the robbery, nor could he say whether they saw what was passing, or whether their backs were turned towards him. Did not recollect galloping up with so much speed as to frighten one of the cart horses, and thereby capsize the cart.

Thomas Barber, a constable, deposed that he took Foxeroft on the evening in question into custody, at the instance of the prosecutor. The whole of the prisoners had arrived before the prosecutor came in, when he picked Foxeroft out from among the rest of the men, and gave him in charge to witness four of the cakes in his possession.

John McClewett, publican, corroborated the evidence of the last witness, stating, in addition, that at the time Foxeroft was taken into custody, Wright accused the prosecutor of having frightened the horse, and caused the evidence of the last witness, stating, in addition, that at the time Foxeroft was taken into custody. Wight accused the prosecutor of having frightened the horse, and caused the evidence of the James Boyd, confectioner, identified the cakes produced as being very similar to those which he had sold Bulger shortly before the robbery. This closed the case for the crown. His Hoxon decided that there was no case against Wright or the Baylisses, and therefore refrained from calling upon either of them for a defence; but upon his asking Foxeroft what he had to say for himself, the latter protested his innocence of the charge, asserting that he had found the cakes on the road.

In proof of this the prisoner recalled the innocence of the charge, asserting that he had found the cakes on the road.

In proof of this the prisoner recalled the witness lather, and inquired of him whether he had not told him so at the time of his being taken into custody; but the witness denied this, saying that the prisoner asserted having purchased them in Bathurst. The cakes were dirty, and were lying loose in prisoner's pecket along with some silver; but the dirt upon the cakes was rather that of the prisoner's pecket than the dirt of the road.

His Honor then briefly recapitulated the circumstances of the case, directing the Jury to acquit the three prisoners charged as accessories, inasmuch as no case could be made out against them, but having then to determine upon all the facts detailed in the evidence as to whether Foxcroft was guilty or not.

The Jury, without leaving the box, acquitted the three prisoners charged as accessories, but found Foxcroft guilty.

The prisoner, when asked what he had to say why sentence should not be passed, called Major Boland and J. Liscombe, Esq., to testify as to his character, by both of whom his honesty and steadiness of conduct were very highly spoken of.

Robert Thorpe was indicted for having, at steer, valued at Eo, the property of Matthew Betts; a second count in the information mentioned the animal as the property of Sarah Betts.

It appeared from the evidence that the animal, which was a very remarkable one, was running at the Fish River in charge of Mr. Betts, who took care of the station on account of his mother, but had strayed several times, and was at last missed altogether, until Mr. Bett was informed that it was being worked in the team of Mr. Harris; upon going there he recognised the bullock as his, and ascertained from Mr. Harris that he had purchased it from the prisoner. The colour of the animal was red, with a white heart on the forehead, and was branded with a capital B on each rump-very peculiar in its form.

The prisoner was defended by Mr. Cherk, and his defence was, that he had purchased the animal from Messrs. Stott and Bennett, and Mr. Phillip Stott, one of the witnesses for the Crown, proved that a steer answering the description of the one in question, was sold by hispartner Bennett, to the prisoner, about four years ago: this evidence was in part corroborated by another witness, named Bellamy, also subpensed on behalf of the Crown, who had been shown the bullock with the view to purchasing it himself. A man named Smith, formerly an assigned servant in the employ of Messrs. Stott and Bennett, likewise corroborated the purchase of the bullock by the prisoner, and three gentlemen were called, by whom the prisoner received a most excellent character for honesty, integrity, and industry. The Chief Constable of Bathurst also proved, that the prisoner had purchased a bullock from Messrs. Stott and Bennett, its was possible, in the first place, that the bullock might have found its way accidentally into the head of Stott and Bennett without their being aware of it, and thus have been purchased by him was so much like that of Mr. Betts so positively swore to; but it was possible, in the first place, that the bullock might have found its way accidentally into the head of Stott and Benne without a stain on his character.

SENTENCE.

Hency Parcreft, convicted of high way robbery, was then brought up for sentence, and His Hoxor remarked he was involved in the same difficulty respecting the term of punishment to be allotted to him, that he had experienced in one or two other cases during the present Assizes. The life provided two kinds of punishment for his offence, the greater being fifteen years' transportation, and the lesser three years' labour in irons.—The first was undoubtedly as much too severe for the present case, as the last was too mild, and he should therefore take the course of passing sentence of fifteen take the course of passing sentence of fiftee years' transportation, but should recommend reduction of that period of punishment to seve years.

The Court then adjourned till nine o'cloc

ROYAL EXPENDITURE.—In the Hampshire
Addertizer of Saturday, we find the following:—
"Some sinister rumours are abroad, we regret to say, relative to the heavy demands on the privy purse, owing to the truly royal outlay of an exalted personage, and the splendid style of angaificence with which the constant auccession of foreign potentates and princely visitors have been received and entertained. It is stated, sorrowfully but earnestly, that an application to Parliament may be expected."—We copy this for the purpose of stating our hope, our belief, that it is not correct. In 1837, when the civil list was settled, the Queen's allowance was put at £10,000 per annum more than the three preceding kings (her grandfather and two uncles) had. It was then arranged that whenever the royal expenditure exceeded the royal income,
the Queen's treasurer should immediately make a report of the fact to Government. We do hope that no application to liquidate the royal debts will be necessary; that, in short, the Queen has not incurred any.—Oxford Herald.

MUTABLILY OF LASUAGE.—Time was when the innermost garment of a lady was called a smock, and for centuries after Shak-speare the word suggested no indelicate idea. The world became more and more refined—smock was inserted in the Index Expurgatorius, and the word shift took its place. What could possibly be more pure and unsuggestive—a shift! a change of linen! all very well if you were thinking of men, to whom shirt has stuck with the tenneity of that of Dejeanita;—why could we not say a woman's shirt! No! Delicacy forbad. Purity itself, however, could suggest nothing more in offensive than a change of linen, a shift! Bashfulness (which is not always modesty) was inexorable, and, in despair, we resorted to France
—the word chemise was adopted, and I now see written up in the shops a still further refinement, "chemises d'homme"—can we go further?
